LIVING OUR LIVES WITH LOVE

Saint Patrick: Bringer of Faith, Chas- er of Snakes

Legend has it that Saint Patrick chased the snakes out of Ireland, and brought the Christian Faith to that land.
He is known as the Apostle of Ireland.

Irish Missionaries for many centuries took the Christian Faith back to parts of Europe and Asia and Oceania and the Americas, some for the first time, some renewing the faith that had waned.

Remembering Ash Wednesday Proclamation: Turn Away from Sin and be Faithful to the Gospel

It was only 10 days ago that we started Lent, but the call of the Proclamation as we received the ashes remains strong "Turn Away from sin and be faithful to the Gospel".

The sins of priests, bishops and cardinals continue to be publicised around the world, especially the breach of trust with children. There is a growing mistrust felt by many priests as a consequence.

In the Australian context, there have been a variety of responses to the verdict of guilt and sentencing of Cardinal Pell in recent weeks. Our prayers and thoughts must go out to the victims and their families, as much as the perpetrators. The Appeal is in June. We wait.

As a proactive response and compliance with our duty of care for all people, our Church in New Zealand is asking us to ensure the safety of minors and vulnerable adults through the vetting of all ministers. Thus the implementation of Safeguarding Polices and Police Checks.

Safeguarding: Our Parish Implementation

Starting this weekend, Star of the Sea Parish is implementing the recent Policy requirement by our Bishops and Religious Leaders regarding a Code of Conduct and National Police Check for Volunteers and Employees.

During the coming weeks before Easter, all Parish Ministry Volunteers and Employees are asked to read and sign these.

Regarding the Code of Conduct.
This is a declaration that we will live and serve as a Church member and minister to the highest ideals. Regarding the Police Check. We declare we have no convictions in regards to care of children.

In anticipation of this, we ask that all completed forms be returned to the Parish Office for processing and sending to the Archdiocese.

Thank you for joining us in this collective action of Safeguarding.

John Pearce CP.

Code of Conduct for Employees & Volunteers in the Catholic Church in Aotearoa New Zealand

Background

This Code of Conduct was approved for use as a Parish Policy by the Pastoral Council on Tuesday 26 February 2019, and to be introduced during Lent with the National Police Check.

National & Parish Code of Conduct

The skills and expertise that employees and volunteers bring to their role is vital to the life of the Church, and is very much appreciated. All those who undertake work for the Church, whether paid or unpaid, are representing the Church and there are expectations for the way they perform their role.

This "Code of Conduct for Employees and Volunteers" sets out these expectations of behaviour. All employees and volunteers are asked to read and sign this Code of Conduct to acknowledge they understand and accept these standards of conduct.

As a Church Employee or Volunteer I agree that:

- I will be honest and trustworthy.
- I will fulfil my role as set out in my role or job description.
- I will seek support if asked to do something beyond my experience, qualifications or comfort-zone.
- I will comply with all policies and procedures provided to me during my work.
- I will treat everyone with respect and courtesy.
- I am personally accountable for my decisions and actions in helping to create a safe and supportive environment within my Church community.
- I will avoid any activities that could bring the Church or my Church community into disrepute.
- I will ensure my actions are not affected by my - personal interests or relationships

- I will follow safeguarding procedures when I am with a child or group of children, or providing ministry or service to any adult.
- I will respect the rights of people to privacy and confidentiality, and confidential information will only be shared with others with the informed consent of the person, unless there is clear danger to them or to others.
- I will take all allegations of harm or abuse seriously and will follow our reporting procedures.
- I understand that I also have the right to report any concern or allegation of abuse or harm directly to the Police or Oranga Tamariki (Ministry for Children).
- I will honour the principles of Te Tiriti o Waitangi in my work. I will be respectful of other people's cultures.
- If my behaviour or conduct is considered to be in breach of any aspect of this Code of Conduct, I understand that consequences may include a requirement to apologise, training, a performance improvement strategy, warnings, or dismissal.

If I do not understand any aspect of this Code of Conduct, I will speak to my manager, supervisor, or ministry leader.

Signed as an acknowledgment that this Code of Conduct has been received by me, I have had an opportunity to read it and ask questions about it, and that I agree to be bound by its terms:

Religion in a Secular Environment

Religion Just as Important as it Always was

Thursday, 28 Feb 2019 CathNews NZ.

Juliet Chevalier-Watts is challenging the view that New Zealand is becoming more secular. She says religious belief appears to be just as important to society as it's always been.

Chevalier-Watts is a University of Waikato senior law lecturer who is a charity law specialist and is in completing a PhD in which she reviews religion and charity law.

She says that charity law is the ideal vehicle to support religion "because of the rules surrounding charity law that actually may give confidence to the public that when it comes to charity, religion is not always the tyranny that people might presume it to be."

Chevalier-Watts said she found that it is extremely rare for people not to have some kind of belief system.

"If you try to remove a system out of society, as occurred in a number of Communist states, it simply goes underground.

"Once religion is permitted again, it flourishes once more."

She suggests that religion "is here to stay and in many regards it is fundamental to society."

Chevalier-Watts says there are some high-profile and influential people who denigrate religion, demanding that it should not exist anymore.

"Obviously, people are entitled to be as negative as they wish, and it is perhaps right in a contemporary society that we can challenge beliefs and religions.

"However, I'm coming at it first from a legal context, and then a societal context and, if you examine the way humans operate, it is apparent that in many ways humans prefer to operate within a religious construct.

"As a result, it is right that it is recognised, and charity law provides a way of ensuring that it is recognised, and charity law provides a way of ensuring that religion is acknowledged and also underpinned by stringent govern-

NSW Pastoral Ministry Conference Encourages Renewal of Pastoral Life Post-Royal Commission

By Mary Brazell, 28 February 2019

Fr Frank Brennan SJ at the NSW Pastoral Ministry Conference.

170 attendees from Catholic parishes across New South Wales have gathered together for the NSW Pastoral Ministry Conference, held at the Dooley's Catholic Club, Lidcombe on Tuesday 26 February 2019.

Organised by the NSW Association of Pastors, Pastoral Associates and Pastoral Workers (NAPPA), the conference titled Drawing and Giving Life, with a focus on the scripture 'you will draw water joyfully from the springs of salvation' (Is12:3), invited attendees to renew their pastoral life in the post Royal-Commission Church.

Richard McMahon, NAPPA co-chair and Director of Pastoral Planning & Implementation, Diocese of Parramatta and Ana Pintos, NAPPA co-chair and Pastoral Associate at Our Lady, Queen of Peace Parish, Greystanes, began the conference with an acknowledgement of country and prayers. Carmel Fenton, NAPPA Secretary and Pastoral Associate of Luddenham-Warragamba Parish, proclaimed the Gospel, which was followed by a sprinkling rite.

"Andrew Reedy, an American sociologist, once commented that there is no more ingenious form of community than a Catholic parish. It's an extraordinary network of relationships.

"The Catholic parish has a prophetic quality about it, particularly today. It is form of community that we require more than ever because of the forces of disconnection and of isolation that mark our contemporary experience.

"Here in Australia, the parish continues to be the place primarily by which people become church – that living social body that bears the light of the risen Christ.

"It is my hope that particularly as we journey towards the Plenary Council 2020, our parishes of Australia will enjoy focus and development.

"The Plenary itself is prefaced on the notion of 'synodality' – this sense of walking together. As we walk together, we are discerning what the Spirit is saying to the Church.

"It will become incumbent of us as we journey forward to think how we make synodality a living characteristic of each of our parish communities.

"We can only do that as we call each one who belongs in those communities into active listening so that our parish communities before circles of listening and places of deep conversation in which people experience a sense of inclusion and belonging and recognising their identity as disciples."

Before the keynote address, attendees were asked to reflect on three questions in a way of fellowship and networking.

Fr Frank Brennan SJ, a Jesuit priest and CEO of Catholic Social Services Australia, then addressed the conference as the keynote speaker.

Fr Frank's presentation discussed how we can renew our pastoral structures to draw and give life in the post-Royal Commission Church in Australia and in what ways those in ministry need to move forward in order to serve the mission of Christ.

"My perspectives will be quite different from some of yours, and that's fine because one of the great things about the Catholic Church is that we have this plurality of experiences and we can reflect on those experiences in light of our traditions, the scriptures and our papal teachings," Fr Frank said.

"We are not going to build an international situation of tolerance and peace unless we build it locally. What is our commitment in our neck of the woods to build a culture of tolerance and of living together in peace?"

"How are we to give women their place at the table when they cannot preside at the Eucharist?"

"How can we ensure that our church is more accountable and transparent and true to the gospel in the wake of the Royal Commission?"

"What should be our approach to employment of LGBTIQ staff and to pastoral care of LGBTIQ parishioners in the wake of the same sex marriage debate?"

"How are we to assure Indigenous Australians their place at the table when governments make laws and policies impacting especially on them and their heritage?"

"How can we make our community more welcome and open to refugees, asylum seekers and new migrants?"

"What should we be drawing from Pope Francis to animate our parishes about stewardship of the environment, responsibility for the poor, spiritual contemptment in an age of disruption and getting the mix right of truth, justice, love, mercy and joy?"

Stalls were available to all attendees from ministries across the state, including the Institute for Mission from the Diocese of Parramatta, Harvest Journeys and the Australian Catholic University.

After morning tea, attendees split up into smaller groups for their first workshop.

Workshops included 'Supporting Muslim-Christian Dialogue' by Rev Dr Patrick McInerney SSC, Director for the Columban Centre for Christian-Muslim Relations and 'Young People and the Church' by Christy Honeysett, National Liaison Office for the Youth Mission Team.

Following lunch, attendees returned to smaller groups for a secondary workshop.

Workshops included 'What next for Plenary 2020' by Lana Turvey-Collins, Facilitator for the Plenary Council 2020, and 'Alpha – Encountering Jesus' by international speaker Josh Angrisano.

In the afternoon, after the workshops, attendees had time to share their experience of the day in small groups and considered what could be taken back to their parishes and ministries.

An optional Mass and dinner were available to attendees at the conclusion of the conference.

Lisa Bright, Pastoral Associate of Mary, Queen of the Family Parish, Blacktown said that the highlight of the conference was the keynote address by Fr Frank.

"He spoke with such a genuine passion for all the areas of our world that we need to pay more attention to. He highlighted that every minister at the conference was the face of Christ in the Church and in whatever circumstance we find ourselves in and with whomever we are accompanying, we must always offer respect, dignity and justice.

"Fr Frank's keynote address left me feeling empowered and encouraged to put our faith into action every single day in the days that can really make a difference in our parish communities.

"Each year the NAPPA Conference has grown to include more elements where we can learn and use in our own parishes.

"Even though we think we may not have time to go to Conferences such as this, they are vital for our own revitalisation, for our professional development and to ensure that as ministers of the Church, we are doing the best we can to be the face of Christ to all in this time and space in which live."

Richard McMahon said he was delighted by the interest in this year's conference, which led it to be a sell-out event.

"I believe the increased engagement with our conference is testimony to the quality keynotes and workshops, and points to a hunger for people in pastoral ministry to network with others, share practical resources, and take time out to reflect upon their role.

"Pastoral ministry can be a tough and lonely road, so I was pleased that so many people through our day together felt affirmed and connected in their work and were re-energised to go back with new ideas and fresh enthusiasm to serve the mission of Jesus Christ.

"My advice to those thinking about coming next year is to get in early to avoid disappointment."
